Part III: Reading Comprehension

Pearl Diving in Kuwait

Before oil was discovered, pearl diving was the backbone of the Kuwaiti economy. Every summer, hundreds of boats left the coast and stayed at sea for about four months. Each boat carried a captain, a group of divers, and a similar number of pullers, who raised the divers from the seabed by rope. Divers worked without any modern equipment. They wore a clip on their noses and leather protection on their fingers, and they descended with a heavy stone, holding their breath for about a minute at a time. A diver might make as many as fifty dives a day and often found no pearls at all. Most divers borrowed money from the boat owner before the season and spent years repaying it. The industry collapsed in the 1930s, when Japan began producing cheaper cultured pearls. Today, the Kuwait National Museum preserves many of the tools used by the divers, and the story of this hard life is taught in schools.

61. What is the passage mainly about?

Sleep and Exam Success

Many university students believe that staying up all night before an exam is the best way to prepare. However, sleep researchers disagree. During sleep, the brain organizes the information it received during the day and stores important facts in long-term memory. A student who sleeps only three or four hours therefore remembers less than one who sleeps seven or eight hours, even if the first student studied for longer. In one study, two groups of students learned the same list of words. One group slept normally, while the other stayed awake all night. Two days later, the rested group remembered about 40 percent more words. Experts recommend that students review the material in the evening, go to bed on time, and wake up early to look over the main points again. They also advise avoiding caffeine after the afternoon, because it makes falling asleep harder.

66. The writer's main purpose is to _____.
(a) describe how to make coffee
(b) encourage students to study all night
(c) explain why sleep helps students prepare for exams
(d) advertise a sleep clinic
67. According to the passage, what happens to information during sleep?
(a) The brain deletes most of it.
(b) It is replaced by new information.
(c) The brain organizes it and stores important facts.
(d) It becomes harder to recall.
68. In the study, the rested group _____.
(a) learned a different list of words
(b) studied longer than the other group
(c) stayed awake all night
(d) remembered more words than the other group
69. The phrase "look over" in the passage is closest in meaning to _____.
(a) measure
(b) ignore
(c) review
(d) hide
70. It is implied that a student who studies until 4 a.m. will probably _____.
(a) remember less than a student who sleeps well
(b) remember more because he studied longer
(c) avoid caffeine
(d) sleep for seven hours

A New Bicycle Service

GreenRide, a new bicycle-sharing service, will begin operating in Kuwait City on 1 November. Users download an application, find a bicycle at one of forty stations, and unlock it with a phone. The first thirty minutes of every ride cost 250 fils, and each additional fifteen minutes cost another 250 fils. Students with a valid university card receive a 50 percent discount on all rides. Bicycles must be returned to a station; otherwise, the user pays a fine of 2 KD. Riders under eighteen may not use the service without written permission from a parent. Helmets, although not required by law, are strongly recommended. The company says the service aims to reduce traffic in the city center and encourage healthier habits. It plans to open twenty more stations by the end of next year.

A Request for More Time

Dear Dr. Salem, I am writing to ask whether I may submit my research report on Thursday instead of Monday. Last week, I caught a bad flu and spent four days in bed, so I was unable to collect the final measurements from the laboratory. The lab technician has told me that the equipment will be available again on Tuesday morning. I have already completed the introduction and the literature review, which I attach to this email so that you can see my progress. I understand that late submissions normally lose ten percent of the grade, and I am willing to accept this penalty if you cannot make an exception. I have also attached a note from my doctor. Thank you for your time and understanding. Yours sincerely, Hamad Al-Mutairi

61. Why is Hamad writing to Dr. Salem?

63. Which of the following has Hamad NOT attached to the email?
- (a) The final measurements
 - (b) The introduction
 - (c) The literature review
 - (d) A note from his doctor
64. It can be inferred that Hamad ____.

Life in the Hive

Honeybees live in colonies that may contain more than fifty thousand individuals. Each colony has one queen, who lays up to two thousand eggs a day, thousands of female workers, and a few hundred male drones. The workers perform different jobs as they grow older: first they clean the hive, then they feed the young, and finally they leave the hive to search for flowers. When a worker finds a good source of nectar, she returns and performs a "waggle dance." The direction of the dance shows where the flowers are in relation to the sun, and its length shows how far away they are. Honeybees are important not only because they produce honey but also because they pollinate about one third of the food crops people eat. In recent years, beekeepers in many countries have reported that colonies are disappearing, and scientists are investigating pesticides, diseases, and loss of habitat as possible causes.

66. What is the passage mainly about?
- (a) The dangers of bee stings
 - (b) How to produce honey at home
 - (c) The life of the queen bee only
 - (d) The organization and importance of honeybees
67. According to the passage, the first job of a young worker bee is to ____.

 - (d) the number of eggs in the hive
69. The word "investigating" in the last sentence is closest in meaning to ____.

 - (d) ignoring
70. What might happen if honeybees disappeared?
- (a) Queens would lay more eggs.
 - (b) Flowers would grow faster.
 - (c) Fewer food crops might be produced.
 - (d) There would be more nectar for other insects.

Should School Start Later?

In many countries, school begins at around seven or eight o'clock in the morning. Medical researchers, however, argue that this schedule does not suit teenagers. During adolescence, the body clock shifts, and young people naturally fall asleep later at night and need to wake later in the morning. When schools start early, many students get less than eight hours of sleep, which can lead to poor concentration, bad moods, and lower marks. In several American cities, schools that moved their start time by one hour reported fewer absences and slightly higher grades. Opponents of the change point out that later finishing times would interfere with sports practice and with students' part-time jobs, and that parents who start work early would have to find new arrangements for their children. Supporters reply that these problems can be solved, while the health benefits cannot easily be obtained in any other way.

71. What is the main topic of the passage?
- (a) The best sports for teenagers
 - (b) How to find a part-time job
 - (c) The dangers of staying awake all night
 - (d) The debate over later school start times
72. According to the passage, why do teenagers need to wake up later?
- (a) Their parents start work late.
 - (b) They have part-time jobs at night.
 - (c) Their body clock changes during adolescence.
 - (d) They study more than younger children.
73. What happened in the American cities that delayed the start of school?
- (a) Absences fell and grades improved slightly.
 - (b) Sports teams became more successful.
 - (c) Parents stopped working early.
 - (d) Grades fell sharply.
74. The phrase "interfere with" in the passage is closest in meaning to ____.
- (a) improve
 - (b) replace
 - (c) disturb
 - (d) support
75. Supporters of a later start believe that ____.
- (a) early schedules help students' marks
 - (b) the health benefits are worth solving the problems
 - (c) teenagers should sleep less
 - (d) sports practice is not important

Part III: Reading Comprehension

Solar Power in the Desert

Kuwait has announced plans to generate fifteen percent of its electricity from renewable sources by 2030. One project, called Al-Noor, is being built in the desert about 100 kilometers west of Kuwait City, where the sun shines for more than three hundred days a year. The first stage produces enough electricity for about 40,000 homes. Engineers face one major problem, however: dust. A thin layer of sand on the panels can reduce their output by up to thirty percent, so the panels must be cleaned regularly. Robots do much of this work because they use very little water, which is scarce in the desert. Officials say that the project will save millions of barrels of oil every year, allowing the country to export oil that would otherwise be burned in power stations.

61. What is the passage mainly about?
- (a) The history of oil exports
 - (b) A solar energy project in Kuwait
 - (c) The dangers of desert storms
 - (d) How to build robots
62. According to the passage, what is the main problem for the engineers?
- (a) The cost of the robots
 - (b) A shortage of sunlight
 - (c) Dust on the panels
 - (d) The distance from the city
63. Why do robots clean the panels?
- (a) They use very little water.
 - (b) They are cheaper than engineers.
 - (c) They work only at night.
 - (d) They can repair broken panels.
64. The word "output" in the passage is closest in meaning to ____.
- (a) weight
 - (b) color
 - (c) temperature
 - (d) production
65. According to officials, the project will allow Kuwait to ____.
- (a) import more oil
 - (b) sell more oil to other countries
 - (c) stop producing oil

The Man Who Explained Sight

Ibn al-Haytham was born in Basra around the year 965 and later settled in Cairo, where he spent most of his working life. At that time, many scholars believed that the eyes send out rays that touch objects and make them visible. Ibn al-Haytham disagreed. Through careful experiments with light, mirrors, and dark rooms, he demonstrated that we see because light travels from objects into our eyes. He recorded his results in the Book of Optics, which he completed in the early eleventh century. What made his work special was his method: he did not accept an idea until he had tested it by experiment, and he encouraged readers to doubt even his own conclusions. When the book was translated into Latin, it strongly influenced European scientists, and many historians now consider him one of the founders of the modern scientific method.

Part III: Reading Comprehension

Will Electric Cars Win Over Drivers?

Sales of electric cars have risen sharply over the past five years, but many drivers still hesitate to buy one. The most common worry is the distance a car can travel before its battery runs out. Although modern models can travel 400 kilometers or more, drivers fear being stranded far from a charging point. Price is another obstacle: electric cars cost, on average, about 30 percent more than petrol cars, although their running costs are lower because electricity is cheaper than fuel and the engines need fewer repairs. Environmental groups point out that electric cars produce no exhaust gases, but critics reply that in many countries the electricity used to charge them is still generated mainly by burning fossil fuels. Experts agree that the benefits will grow as more electricity comes from renewable sources.

61. What is the passage mainly about?

63. Why are the running costs of electric cars lower?
- (a) They never need a battery.
 - (b) They are much lighter than petrol cars.
 - (c) They are sold at a lower price.

64. What do critics say about electric cars?
- (a) They produce more exhaust gases than petrol cars.
 - (b) The electricity they use often comes from fossil fuels.
 - (c) They are not popular with environmental groups.
 - (d) They cannot travel 400 kilometers.
65. The word "obstacle" in the passage is closest in meaning to ____.

Coral Reefs Under Threat

Coral reefs cover less than one percent of the ocean floor, yet they support about a quarter of all marine species. Corals are tiny animals that build hard skeletons of limestone, and over thousands of years these skeletons form huge structures. Inside the corals' tissues live microscopic algae that provide food through photosynthesis and give the reefs their bright colors. When the water becomes too warm, the corals expel the algae and turn white, a process called bleaching. Bleached corals are not dead, but they are weak, and if the warm water continues for too long, they die. Reefs also protect coastlines by reducing the force of waves, and they provide food and income for millions of people. Scientists warn that, unless ocean temperatures stop rising, large areas of reef may disappear within decades.

Part III: Reading Comprehension

Summer Marine Science Camp

Applications are now open for the Summer Marine Science Camp, which will run from 5 to 23 July at the Coastal Research Station. The camp is open to students aged fifteen to seventeen who have an interest in biology or environmental science. Participants will learn to collect water samples, identify fish species, and use underwater cameras. Each day begins at 7:30 a.m. with a lecture, followed by field work on the beach or aboard the research boat. Because places are limited to thirty students, selection is based on a short essay and a recommendation from a science teacher. The fee is 150 KD, which includes meals, equipment, and transportation from the city, but accommodation is not provided. Applications must be submitted online before 15 May, and successful candidates will be informed by email within two weeks.

The Machine That Changed Reading

Before the fifteenth century, books in Europe were copied by hand, a process so slow that a single book could take months to finish. Only the Church, universities, and wealthy families could afford them. Around 1440, Johannes Gutenberg, a German goldsmith, developed a printing press that used movable metal letters. Letters could be arranged into words, inked, pressed onto paper, and then reused for the next page. Within fifty years, printing presses were operating in more than two hundred cities, and millions of books had been produced. As books became cheaper, more people learned to read, and new ideas spread much faster than before. Historians often regard the printing press as one of the most important inventions in history because it helped to change education, religion, and science.

66. What is the passage mainly about?
- (a) The history of universities in Europe
 - (b) The invention of the printing press and its effects
 - (c) The life of a German goldsmith
 - (d) How books are copied by hand
67. Why were books so expensive before the printing press?
- (a) They had to be copied slowly by hand.
 - (b) Paper was not available.
 - (c) They were all written in Latin.
 - (d) Nobody wanted to read them.
68. What was new about Gutenberg's press?
- (a) It was built from wood only.
 - (b) It used metal letters that could be used again.
 - (c) It printed a whole book at once.
 - (d) It could print in several colors.
69. What happened as books became cheaper?
- (a) Churches stopped using books.
 - (b) Printing presses disappeared.
 - (c) Fewer universities were built.
 - (d) More people learned to read.
70. The word "regard" in the passage is closest in meaning to ____.
- (a) consider
 - (b) attack
 - (c) forget
 - (d) measure

Why Campus Still Matters

Dear Editor, I disagree with the recent suggestion that all university courses should be taught online. Online classes are convenient, but they cannot replace the experience of studying on campus. In a lecture hall, students can ask questions immediately, and discussions with classmates often lead to new ideas. In engineering and science courses, laboratory work is essential, and it cannot be done through a screen. Moreover, many students do not have a quiet place or a reliable internet connection at home, which puts them at a serious disadvantage. I do accept that recorded lectures are useful for review. Therefore, I propose that universities use online tools to support, rather than replace, classroom teaching. Sincerely, Reem Al-Saleh

71. What is the writer's main purpose?
- (a) To argue against moving all courses online
 - (b) To praise recorded lectures
 - (c) To complain about laboratory fees
 - (d) To advertise a new online course
72. Why does the writer say laboratory work cannot be taught online?
- (a) It cannot be done through a screen.
 - (b) It is too expensive.
 - (c) It is not important.
 - (d) Students dislike it.
73. According to the writer, what disadvantage do some students face at home?
- (a) Too many classmates
 - (b) A lack of a quiet place or reliable internet
 - (c) Long travel times
 - (d) A shortage of textbooks
74. What does the writer accept about online learning?
- (a) All students prefer it.
 - (b) Laboratory work should be recorded.
 - (c) Recorded lectures are useful for review.
 - (d) Online classes are better than lectures.
75. What does the writer propose?
- (a) Universities should close their campuses.
 - (b) Lecture halls should be larger.
 - (c) Online tools should support classroom teaching.
 - (d) Laboratory courses should be shorter.
